LET'S TALK
IT OVER...

ANOTHER school year draws to a close. As it ends we pause to consider the good, the bad, and the future.

On the negative side at least three chapters are experiencing real difficulties — Alpha-Tau, (Michigan), Delta (Rutgers), and Lambda (Calif.).

Satisfactory housing is presently unavailable to the Auburn and Arizona chapters, and the Iowa State Colony. The Chi Chapter at Dartmouth is no more, and the Tulane Colony has been unsuccessful.

Many chapters are plagued with "Senior Move Out", others face the competition of apartment living. Operating costs are mounting rapidly with increased property taxes being a major cause. Campus turmoil, "Pot", the draft, early marriages, are a fact of life and have some effect upon the stability of the fraternity system.

The other side of the coin is bright, however. We end the year with five new chapters: Florida Institute of Technology, Melbourne, Florida; Miami University, Oxford, Ohio; West Virginia University, Morgantown, West Virginia, Oglethorpe College, Atlanta, Georgia; and the University of California-Davis, Davis, Calif.

Tau, at Alabama, will occupy a new house in September. The new addition to Phi (Lehigh) was completed, and Alpha-Chi (Ohio-Wesleyan) will occupy their new addition in September.

Homes were purchased and occupied by the new chapters at Miami and Davis. New quarters have been purchased for the chapters at Florida State University and West Virginia and will be available for the fall '69. Theta Delta at the University of Florida, expects to have its new home constructed and ready for occupancy by February 1970.

The chapters will attest to the value of the new Regional Counsellors program. A real vote of thanks is due all of the Counsellors for their fine work.

Brother David Differding will join the Council Staff as Assistant National Director on September 1, 1969. His presence will vastly enhance the efficiency of the Council office. The Council has been understaffed this past year.

Chi Phi is still a true fellowship of men — a fact that we tend to overlook but that our undergraduate members still cherish. This fact alone is justification for alumni to continue to support their Fraternity.

The great majority of our chapters are strong in number, financially sound, well managed, and a real source of inspiration and fellowship to the membership. On this evidence the future of Chi looks good.

EMORY UNIVERSITY is a privately supported school occupying a 560 acre campus in the Druid Hills section in northeast Atlanta, Ga. Founded by the Methodist Church in 1836 as a college at Oxford, Georgia, Emory became a university in Atlanta under a new charter in 1915. Today the original site of the college is occupied by Oxford College, a junior college division of the University. Other divisions beside Emory College and Oxford College would include a medical school, a law school, a nursing school, a graduate school in arts and sciences, a dental school, a business school, and a theology school.

Today the college enrollment numbers about 2300-2400 students with about 5400 enrolled in both graduate and undergraduate divisions. Complementing the academic programs offered at Emory College are 106 activities and organizations.

Among these organizations are 13 national social fraternities. The fraternities, in order of their founding on the Emory campus are: Chi Phi, Kappa Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Nu, Pi Kappa Alpha, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Sigma Chi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Gamma Delta.

Paralleling much of the development of Emory is the Gamma Chapter of Chi Phi.

The Origin of the Gamma Chapter

Emory College, which eventually grew into Emory University, was founded in 1836 under the auspices of the Methodist Church and was established on a rural campus in the tiny Middle Georgia town of Oxford. For the students, contact with the outside world was infrequent, and it was natural that social activities centered around student organizations, both literary and social.

Henry M. Bullock, in his book, A History of Emory University, describes the historical background of fraternities on the campus of Emory College:

The literary sororities from their inception served social ends and the fraternities, especially after the War [Civil War] were more avowedly social in their aims and activities. When the trustees lifted the regulation barring secret societies, the students lost no time in organizing or bringing to light organizations which already existed. For nearly a year preceding that time, a few of the students had been concerned with the old groups, "The Mystic Seven" and "The Crescent," and sought to obtain permission from the trustees to re-establish these societies—which had been banned in 1859 or 1860.¹

Chi Phi—First on the Emory Campus

Emory's chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity was established in 1869. Its birth was not easy and was attended by considerable frustration.

Judge Capers Dickson, who later became a strong force on the faculty of Emory College, is regarded as the leading figure in the founding of the Emory chapter. Reminiscing about the early days of the chapter, Judge Dickson had this to say in a letter he wrote in 1892 to E. A. Weaver, a Chi Phi brother in Philadelphia:

Before the Civil War there were seven or eight secret societies at Emory College, but in 1859 or 1860 the Trustees of the college took steps to abolish them and prohibited the establishment of all similar organizations in the future. The two leading fraternities were known as "The Mystic Seven" and "The Crescent" societies, and in 1868 Bolling H. Sasnett, James O. Andrew, Wm. P. Lovejoy, Walter R. Branham, Robert L. Prince, Charles O. Jones and I (members of the junior class) made an effort to reestablish these two societies by requesting the faculty of the institution to obtain for us permission from The Trustees for their re-establishment. The faculty failed to make known our request to The Trustees and in the Spring of 1869 no action had been taken on the matter. We had naturally become impatient and somewhat rebellious at this seeming indifference to our wishes and about the first of May 1869 Brother Sasnett and I had a consultation in regard to the matter and decided that, as our college course would end in July following and before we could get The Trustees to act in the matter, we would establish a secret society of some kind before we graduated and keep its existence concealed from the college authorities until we could obtain the consent of the Trustees for its establishment. Brother Sasnett had obtained information of the existence and high standing of the Chi Phi Fraternity at the University of Georgia, at Athens; he knew Brother Emory Speer and some other members at that place, and we determined to try to establish a chapter of the fraternity at Emory College. Brother Sasnett at once wrote to Brother Speer and a few days thereafter Brother Henry H. Perry, whom we had associated with us in our enterprise, wrote to Brother P. W. Meldrim in regard to the matter. The result of this correspondence was, that

1016 N. 64th St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Brother Matt:

Your letter of February 21st, received. Regulation Badge, #4858, which you have record that I bought January 20th, 1921. has been lost. I have not worn it in a couple of years. Up to that time, for nearly twenty (20) years, I wore the badge at all times, night and day, on my pajamas, night shirt, and in my mouth when taking a bath, as a matter of fact, the badge never left my body for nearly twenty (20) years.

I think the theory that the badge is the personal property of the owner, the member in whose name it is registered on the books, that it stays on that particular person from the time he enters college until he comes out, night or day, is a very pretty one. This is the case in the Georgia chapters. I am doing all I can to further the idea that the member must wear the badge all the time, and cannot loan it to any body, man or woman. It is his personal, individual, permanent possession, and is not to be loaned.

In the Georgia Chapters the badge is worn all the time.
When I say all the time, I mean all the time.

The last year or two, since I lost the badge referred to in your letter, I have been wearing the pendant emblem. The one I have is #912.

As a result of the policy of the Georgia chapters to wear the badge all the time, and in the mouth when taking a bath, my room-mate, the now celebrated Samuel James Crowe, surgeon, John Hopkins Hospital, swallowed his badge and never found it, so far as I know. It reminds me of the story of the bumble bee the cow swallowed. The bumble bee went to sleep, and when he-waked up, the cow was gone.

With best wishes always, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Thomas Whipple Connally

about the middle of May, Brother P. W. Meldrim came over to Oxford and established Kappa Chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity. The chapter members being as follows: James O. Andrew, Walter R. Branham Jr., Capers Dickson, Charles O. Jones, Wm. P. Lovejoy, Robert L. Pierce, and Bolling H. Sasnett, of the class of '69 and Robert W. Davis, Ebenezer S. Florence, Henry Perry, and Emmett Womack, of the class of '70. On the following night a chapter of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity was established at Emory College.

At the next meeting of the Board of Trustees of Emory College in July 1869, our application for permission to establish a chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity at the institution, and a similar application by the Kappa Alphas (founded July 4th) for the establishment of a chapter of their fraternity, were acted on and granted on condition that the constitutions of the two fraternities should be submitted to the President of the College for examination and approval. I do not know how the Kappa Alphas met the condition without violating their obligation of secrecy as to the laws of their fraternity; but we speedily extricated ourselves from the dilemma in a very simple manner. Under our Constitution each chapter had the privilege of electing two honorary members, and we at once elected the President of the College, Dr. Luther M. Smith, an honorary member of our chapter, and were thereby enabled to meet the requirement of the Board of Trustees in regard to the exhibition of our Constitution and at the same time keep our obligation of secrecy respecting the laws of the fraternity. Our constitution was duly examined by President Smith and received his hearty approval. There being no longer any occasion for concealment in the matter, the existence of the chapter was made public and the members secured a hall and at once entered actively and enthusiastically into the work of an organized college fraternity. This was at the opening of the Fall term of 1869, and at that time there were only four of the charter members in college, seven of us having graduated July of that year. However, this contingency had been anticipated and provided for during our sub rosa existence, and before those seven members had graduated, we had either initiated or pledged seven more men in the class of '70, four or five men in the class of '71, and about the same number in the class of '72; and hence the Chapter began its open and active existence with about twenty members. The auspices under which it began its existence gave promise of a prosperous future, and this has been fully realized. (Capers Dickson)

Union with the Northern Order

Of course, the chapters at Emory and at the University of Georgia that Judge Dickson wrote about were units of the Chi Phi Southern Order, which had been founded at the University of North Carolina in 1858. The Northern Order of the Fraternity had been established in 1854, with the union of the Hobart and Princeton Orders. After the Civil War, correspondence between the Northern and Southern order had led to the proposal that these two separate but similar orders be joined.

The union was of course realized, but not without some opposition. The Emory chapter, known in the organization of the Southern Order as Kappa, was the last chapter in the Southern Order to agree to the union, but did finally unite in 1875. Kappa's opposition to union was not because the Emory chapter objected in principle but because the chapter thought the manner in which the union was effected was illegitimate.

The chapter listed its opposition thus:

1. That as the committee appointed by the convention to agree with a similar committee from the northern convention upon terms of union did not meet nor take any action in the matter, the grand chapter had no right to appoint another committee as a substitute.
2. That the grand chapter had power to decide constitutional points that might arise in the interim of the meetings of the convention; but this was not a constitutional question, inasmuch as the constitution had nothing in it with regard to union, hence only the voice of the chapters in convention assembled was authoritative.
3. That the convention which appointed the aforesaid committee adopted a resolution requiring, in order to effect union, the unanimous consent of the chapters. ("the vote requisite for union being all the chapters, each chapter requiring a two-thirds vote."—Minutes of convention.) That since she did not believe the committee a legal one, she could not therefore consent to union.

4. That even supposing the committee substituted was virtually the same committee authorized by the convention, yet it did not act within the time (six months) prescribed by the convention; that the proceedings of the committee were therefore unauthorized.²

The grand chapter rejected Kappa's protest and when all the other southern chapters accepted this declaration as a fact, Kappa, "rather than appear obstinate, fell into line and received a charter from the new order." At this time Kappa chapter was renamed Gamma. Under the new name charter members were the following men: J. W. Lee, S. L. Smith, W. M. Crow, W. C. Lovett, S. N. Conally, W. H. Huntley, N. T. Burks, R. W. McDonnell, C. D. Woodson, W. W. Lewis, W. H. Lowe, B. F. Rawlings, Talford Smith, J. O. Nolan, E. G. Thomas, H. W. Smith, D. F. C. Timmons, J. W. Roberts, and Wm. Diamond.

The date of issue which the charter bears is July 23, 1874, but the minutes of the chapter show that not until January 29, 1875, was a motion to enter the union adopted. Only after the union was approved, did the chapter request the new constitution. On June 22, 1874, the new constitution was read in the club room for the first time.

Aid to the Eta Chapter

As related in Judge Dickson's letter above, the Chi Phi chapter at the University of Georgia was the spiritual parent of the Emory chapter, and when the Eta chapter fell on hard times in the mid-1870s, it was fitting that Gamma came to the rescue of the brethren at Eta.

In 1874, the board of trustees of the University adopted a rule that required all students "... who matriculated at the university to sign a pledge that they would not join a fraternity while in college."³

As a result of that order Emory College became, for a while, the home-in-exile for the Eta chapter:

Eta chapter of Chi Phi, although in a prosperous condition, resolved to disband and all the paraphernalia, which was at that time of the old Southern order, together with the charter and records, was entrusted to the Kappa chapter at Emory College.⁴

In 1878, the trustees of the University of Georgia changed their minds and again agreed to allow fraternities on campus. At this time "... Brothers Joel E. Wooten, Henry R. DeJarnett, Wm. M. Dunbar and Tracy Baxter came over from Gamma to assist in the first initiation."⁵

They rode in a carriage from Oxford to Athens, bringing the paraphernalia with them. But the original charter of Eta and her records previous to this time are irrevocably lost. So far as can be ascertained, the chapter returned to the fraternity without formal authority.⁶

During the suspension period at the University the minutes of Gamma chapter reported a theft in the chapter room. It was probably during this time that the Eta charter was stolen.

Social Life of the Early Chapter

Emory College was not a coed institution and official social activities were likely to be strained. Nevertheless, a young man who was a member of a fraternity found the social life a trifle less restrictive.

In the early days of Oxford it was the homes that as much as anything else, provided for the social life of the students for both fraternity and non-fraternity members. However, fraternities were usually free from restraints of faculty members and other adults. With no women on the Oxford campus—'Cov' [Covington, Georgia] as it was familiarly called, attracted many of the boys. There were to be found a fair show of pretty girls, there were barber shops and whiskey shops 'all of which things were not without their patrons among the boys.' Then too, the young ladies of the Covington Female College claimed some attention.⁷

Apparently, members of Chi Phi were particularly likely to be seen on the road to Covington. Bullock quotes an article from one of the college publications, the Oxford Review, in which several members of Chi Phi are mentioned:

RELIEF ASSOCIATION—We are very much grieved to learn that our friends—Lane, Lovejoy, Dixon, Branham, Nolan, and Turner, and Baldwin—who pay frequent visits to the Covington ladies, are under the painful necessity of carrying their fine clothes, combs, brushes, etc., in their hands to within a few hundred yards of the city, where they exchange clothes, comb their hair, black boots, etc. Now, we propose to establish a 'Wayside Home,' just this side of Covington for the special benefit of these gentlemen, and respectfully invite them to call and see us as they pass. We have fitted up a nice room, elegantly furnished, in which we will accommodate these, and all other gentlemen who pass that way on similar business, free of charge.⁸

In the latter part of the nineteenth century, it became the custom for the brothers to go annually en masse to Atlanta to have a picture taken of the chapter—usually in February. Since Atlanta was the home of many Gamma Chi Phis, the city provided much entertainment and enjoyment for the early brothers. One of the early Gamma Records tells us that ". . . several of the Sophomores came nearly being run over by the 'no-pulley-no-pushy-cars' while standing a tip-toe in the middle of the street, craning their wise noggins as if, perchance, they might be enabled to see what was on top of the 'skyscraper' but, fortunately, a dignified senior was each time sufficiently near to save his imperiled brother from total demolition and irrevocable atomization."⁹

Trust Association and Chapter Houses

Nearly from the time of the founding of Emory College, one of the biggest social events of the year was Commencement Week. Around the end of the nineteenth century, when the various fraternity chapters had become well established on the Emory campus, dinners for the chapter alumni were popular. The Gamma Record for 1900 describes one such dinner that was to have profound implications for the history of the chapter:

On the following evening Gamma gave her Alumni a banquet at the Chapter-House. The custom, for many years obsolete, was revived and is now a permanent institution. It proved of great satisfaction and pleasure to us to become so well acquainted with so many of our older Alumni. Many a rousing toast was spoken around the festive board and it was visibly demonstrated to us that time, labor and separation do not quench the ardent fires that ever burn in the hearts of Chi Phi's devotees. Every Chapter should have an annual reunion and 'love feast.' They are the magic chords that bind alumni to their chapters.¹⁰

It was at this same banquet that the Gamma Trust Association was organized. According to the Gamma Record, a charter for this organization had been issued by a special session of the Superior Court of Newton County, Georgia in the spring of 1899. The Gamma Record for 1900 states that "The object of this Association is the putting of Gamma Chapter on a legal basis in order that, when the time seem propitious, she will be able to take active measures looking to the building and owning of a Chapter-House."

Officers of the new association were: president—Vaughn Nixon; secretary-treasurer—Herbert A. Sage; directors—Judge Capers Dickson, Judge H. E. W. Palmer, Vaughn Nixon, C. K. Henderson and Herbert A. Sage.

Actually, the subject of a suitable chapter house had been an issue for several years.

In the 1870's and 1880's the fraternities were holding their meetings in various rooms about the campus, but in the 1890's permission was obtained from the trustees to build chapter houses but not without approval of the faculty. The Gamma chapter of Chi Phi was the first fraternity at Emory to establish their own chapter house in 1895. Plans for the chapter house were being made as early as May 2, 1893, when George N. MacDonell, the Alpha, wrote to the Grand Lodge that "One subject has very deeply interested us lately. That is the matter of securing a chapter house."¹¹ "Brothers Pope and Rice together with two other Eta Brothers, paid us a visit recently and they did much by their suggestions to encourage us in our efforts."¹²

The Chapter Report submitted on August 9th, 1893 stated that "We have great difficulty in obtaining a lot for a chapter house, as none of the residents of Oxford will sell less than one or two acres, and, of course, we do not care for that much. We are making very good progress, however and hope in two years time to have a house that will do the fraternity an honor. Two or three thousand dollars has been subscribed by the alumni and active members and as soon as we succeed in getting a suitable site, will commence building at once. Now have two or three very nice places in view."¹³

On May 4, 1895, the chapter made this statement:

We have about completed arrangements now by which Gamma is to have a chapter house next year. One of the handsomest houses in Oxford will be rented and between eight and ten of the brothers will have rooms therein. We have found it very difficult to secure the co-operation of many of our alumni in this chapter house matter, and so we have decided to take the matter in hand and shift for ourselves until we can get them interested.¹⁴

The minutes of the chapter in 1899 give some insight into the position of the Chi Phi chapter around the turn of the century and also into the value of the leased chapter house:

The personnel of our chapter is as high as could be wished. Numbering twenty-two in all, there is no doubt that a more congenial or manly set of fellows could not be found in the rest of the student body. Most of the best families here are our staunch supporters. Their doors are always open to a wearer of the scarlet and blue and they always lend helping hands to any of our social affairs. The college faculty have always recognized our leadership among the students and whenever they wish to accomplish anything special our assistance is generally sought.¹⁵

The club-house is still a point of much interest to the boys. Of late we have wrought many improvements and as a result of a streak of enthusiasm some of the brothers have fitted up some very elegant rooms. The house is one of the most desirable within the college precincts and aid us no little in our 'spiking' (pledging), for our own beautiful library and parlor never fails to catch the eye of a new man.¹⁶

Building Prestige

Even though Chi Phi had been the first chapter of any national fraternity established on the Emory College campus, there was shortly very considerable competition. As Judge Dickson indicated in his letter to Brother Weaver, a chapter of Kappa Alpha Order (the Southern Order) was chartered at Emory the day after the Chi Phi chapter was established. In a few years, there were also chapters of four other fraternities — Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Gamma of Chi Phi, however, held its own. In July of 1884, William R. Johnston, then Zeta of the Chi Phi chapter, wrote in one of his reports that

Gamma Chapter, 1924

The practice of our five rival fraternities (ATO, KA, SN, Phi Delta Theta, and SAE) is to initiate men almost upon sight. In this way Gamma loses some men who, after a knowledge of college affairs might seek to cast their lot with 'kiffies.' But we hold to the principle that quality is preferable to quantity, and initiate none but those whom we know well either personally or by recommendation of brothers. Proceeding with this motto, we found seven men during the year who were glad to wear the scarlet and blue and who are enthusiastic for Chi Phi.¹⁷

The same report by Brother Johnston revealed that the Gamma chapter was taking a realistic approach to the problem of quality; the chapter recommended that the Convention provide that one grand officer of the Fraternity pay an annual visit to each chapter.

The selectivity proved to be worthwhile when, later that year, college medals in mathematics, declamation and Latin were won by brothers of the Gamma chapter.

In the matter of pledging, the Chi Phi chapter had resolved to proceed cautiously, although the college had given permission to pledge boys who were not yet enrolled at Emory.

(Once the school and the Chi Phi chapter moved to its Atlanta campus, the pledging of boys in prep school became more common; for a while—up until 1932, in fact—there was even an Atlanta Chi Phi Pledge Club. In 1932, a new system of rushing and pledging was inaugurated which required that all pledges be broken upon entrance in college, and which also stipulated a somewhat delayed plan of rushing for all fraternities on the Emory campus.)

Fraternities on the Oxford campus were never completely free from fire of critics. Bullock says that:

In 1909 a memorial looking toward the abolishing of the Greek letter fraternities, signed by a large number of students, was presented to the trustees, who gave it courteous treatment, spoke gravely about the 'disturbing conditions which surrounded secret societies,' and did nothing.¹⁸

At this time the membership in the various fraternities usually numbered from 55 to 60 percent of the students in the College (today the figure is about 69 percent on a campus in a large metropolitan area with many times the extra-curricular advantages found on the old Oxford campus). This figure does vary some. In 1892 over three-fourths of the students belonged to fraternities but in 1901 less than half the students were in a fraternity.

Although fraternities ventured into the field of college journalism for awhile in their early days, it was found that "their group rivalries made that field of endeavor unsuited to them at that adolescent, coming-of-age period of the fraternity movement."¹⁹ Such rivalries led to the founding of the Panhellenic Council which brought about a better co-operation between the Greeks.

Bullock describes the sort of situation that led to the founding of the Panhellenic Council:

—fraternal groups continued to play a large part. The regular weekly meetings (in the earlier days meetings were held every two weeks) and the fellowship, to say nothing of the political scheming, gave outlet for social expression. Receptions and suppers given by them were important social events of commencement week. The freshman coming to Emory found himself met at the train, conducted to beautiful club rooms, entertained, kept constantly in the company of members of the particular group into whose hands he had fallen, and finally found himself a member of the organization.—This 'rushing' or 'spiking' was carried to such extremes that at times both fraternity men and non-fraternity urged (in 1907) a regulation to prevent 'spiking' until three months after a student entered school.²¹

Despite the "beautiful club rooms" where "spiking" was carried on, the need was continued to be felt for a house that the chapter could call its own. Bullock says that:

In 1907, largely through the efforts of Thomas Whipple Connally, Gamma '02 a chapter alumni [actually, the second such association to be thus named] association, called the Gamma Trust Association, was formed and chartered by the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia. It was the object of the Gamma Trust Association to build a chapter house for the use of Gamma chapter but until the time Emory College became Emory University and was moved to Atlanta, no action toward securing a house had been taken, save the purchase of a lot in Oxford.²²

Emory Moves to Atlanta

Emory and its Chi Phi chapter was not destined to remain in the rural surroundings of Oxford. In 1915, a group of petitioners representing the Educational Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, received a charter for Emory University, to be established in Atlanta. It was stipulated that Emory College would become the undergraduate unit of the fledging university.

Several schools of Emory University had been in operation for several years when Emory College was moved to the new Atlanta campus in 1919. During the same year, the Gamma Trust Association purchased a lot facing the new campus where there was erected a simple one-story building to serve as a chapter house for the Gamma chapter.

In the new environment, Gamma and the entire fraternity system found a significant place. Bullock has this to say:

The absence of the intimacy of little Oxford emphasized the need for the smaller group contacts provided by the social fraternities and the increased enrollment caused the organization of new chapters of national fraternities. — These fraternal groups, and especially those which had brought from Oxford a heritage of age lent a much needed stability to university life in the early years.²³

A Permanent Home

Eventually, the importance of the fraternity system at Emory University was recognized, and in 1927,

... the trustees made available a beautiful wooded section of the campus for a new Fraternity Row. They also arranged for lots to be leased to the fraternities for the nominal sum of $1, and made generous loan provisions to help chapters to build there.²⁴

Under the leadership of Judge Luther Z. Rosser, as president, and H. Warner Martin, as chairman of the finance committee, the Gamma Trust Association raised the necessary funds and in 1930, Tom Connally Hall was erected at 8 Fraternity Row (for many years the address was 3 Fraternity Row) on the Emory University campus. As part of the contract to build Tom Connally Hall, the chapter had to sell the old house to the university, so until the new quarters were complete the brothers were housed temporarily in a residence on 1282 South Oxford Road.

In addition to the many Chi Phis that devoted funds, the following members greatly aided Gamma in constructing its new house:

Committee Chairmen: Finance, H. Warner Martin; Subscriptions, Dr. William C. Warren, Jr.; Furnishing House, Mrs. Vaughn Nixon; Buildings and Grounds, Walter T. Colquitt; Subscriptions to Gamma Trust Assn., Charles T. Winship; House, Thomas W. Moore; Publicity, L. K. Starr; Subscriptions from undergraduates, Graves Smith; Ex-officio members of all committees, Judge Luther Z. Rosser, Preston S. Arkwright, Jr.

General Committee: Preston S. Arkwright, Jr., Dr. Montague L. Boyd, Walter T. Colquitt, James E. Dickey, Jr., Fielding Dillard, Dr. Walter B. Emory, R. Emerson Gardner, W. A. Haygood, Henry S. Johnson, Jr., James G. Lester, H. Warner Martin, Thomas W. Moore, Judge Virlyn B. Moore, Howard Muse, Vaughn Nixon, Robert S. Parker, Judge Luther Z. Rosser, Charles E. Shepard, Palmer J. Smith, Graves Smith, L. K. Starr, Dr. Wm. C. Warren, Jr., Charles T. Winship, Dr. Goodrich White.

The new house was dedicated at the beginning of the school year in 1930, and is the present home of Gamma Chapter. The house was completed about Sept. 15th, and on October 1st eighteen of the brothers were luxuriously accommodated. At the formal dedication, which took place Sunday afternoon, some five hundred Chi Phis, and friends of Tom Connally were shown through the house, and at four-thirty a bronze tablet was unveiled to the memory of the man for whom the house is named. Brothers taking part in the ceremony were Dean Parker and Dean White of Emory, Mr. Robert S. Parker, and Judge Luther Z. Rosser. The actual unveiling was done by Tom Connally's two children. After this, all Chi Phis present adjourned to the lodge room where a memorial service was held in memory of Brother Connally. There has been the finest cooperation and painstaking care shown in the erection of Tom Connally Hall, and we of the active chapter are certainly appreciative of what the alumni of Gamma, Tom Connally's friends and other contributors have done for us. It has been the aim of Gamma throughout the year to maintain the house in the fine condition in which we received it last fall, and I think we may all be proud of the cooperation which the brothers have given."—Hugh Dorsey, Jr. Zeta.²⁵

For many years a tradition at Emory was the push ball races which actually consisted of a wrestling match among two teams around a large ball. Dr. English in his chronicle of Emory described the pushball battle in the

WHEN PEOPLE BEGIN to discuss the pros and cons of fraternities, one often hears concerns about scholarship, finances, brotherhood, social activities and apathy.

Fraternities usually react to criticism in these areas by requiring pledges to study at the library for a specified number of hours a week, fining brothers if they do not pay their bills on time, having actives talk about brotherhood during rush when they do not understand what it means and conducting some type of welfare project in order to show their critics that they are concerned with more than the social aspects of life and, therefore, are not apathetic.

One word I seldom hear in the fraternity world is "commitment." Granted the word is used during pledge-ship and especially during initiation, but how often do we hear it being used by active members of the chapter during their remaining three years? You may also ask, commitment to what? Commitment to brotherhood? Commitment to fraternity? Commitment toward doing the best "for the house"?

If I were to answer "yes" to the questions mentioned above, I am sure many of you would consider not reading any further. The commitment I am most concerned about, however, is commitment to oneself. When a man elects to join a fraternity, he personally makes a physical, spiritual and financial commitment to an organization called a fraternity but, most important, he makes a commitment to himself.

A typical dictionary will give the following definition of the word commitment: "to hold in trust or charge; entrusted." The word entrust means to invest with a responsibility. Thus, by fulfilling these commitments, a man is not only being responsible to the organization he joined but also to himself. Men who do not fulfill their commitments and obligations to an organization they joined are not only cheating themselves and acting irresponsibly, but are also the main causes in the failure of that organization, an organization which they often criticize.

It is my thesis that most of the problems of fraternities can be minimized if proper commitment toward the above mentioned concerns is obtained from all members of the organization. Problems concerning scholarship, finances, brotherhood, social activities and apathy would not have to be dealt with on an individual or "patchwork" basis if the members of the organization were committed to respect the study time of other members, paid their bills on time, and worked together toward an active and constructive social program.

This thesis may seem too simple or idealistic to many of you, but I think you will all agree that no organization will succeed if it does not have a general commitment of its members to at least fulfill the functions and purposes of the organization. It is impossible to approach any one of these problem areas unless your membership is sincere in its desire to improve the overall atmosphere of the organization.

If your organization is confronted with this problem of commitment on the part of your members, the obvious question is how can this be changed? I believe the only solution to this problem is through the reorganization of your chapter and a proper pledge program.

Your first problem is to convince the active members of your organization to change their attitudes toward their commitments to the chapter, and then construct a pledge program that will create a positive atmosphere among your new members. Once this atmosphere is created, the general concerns discussed earlier will usually take care of themselves and the chapter will not have to take a "patchwork" approach to its problems. If pledges are not belittled or embarrassed, if the active members understand and believe in the functions and purposes of their organization, then, and only then, will your organization have a chance to function effectively. If a negative attitude, one of noncommitments, is created during a person's pledgship, it will permeate through all the programs the organization may develop and upon future members that may pledge.

It seems almost ludicrous to think of apathetic juniors and seniors criticizing their organization and system when they are the main causes of its decay. As I mentioned before, they are not only neglecting their responsibility to the organization they joined but also their own responsibility to fulfill their commitments. I personally consider these men parasites on the system; living off the intangible advantages the system offers but refusing to contribute to its survival and existence. It may be necessary to lose a few members of the organization in creating this proper atmosphere, but I am sure it will be worth the price in the long run.

Finally, you may have noticed that I have avoided using the word fraternity and in its place have used the word organization. I have done this purposely, as I often feel that too many fraternity men hide under the cover of the word fraternity. How often has your house heard a member, who is being asked to pay his first semester bills in the month of May, rebut with the following statement: "Are you seriously going to place business before brotherhood?" Gentlemen, running a fraternity is a business. It is also a place where one can learn about running a business, can learn about the organization of a government body, can learn to lead other men, can learn to live with other men and can learn that any group or organization cannot operate efficiently if it does not have the commitment of its members.

I hope that all members of fraternities ask themselves whether they are contributing to the success or failure of their fraternity. I also believe it's about time that the contributing members should begin to question the importance of having members who do not commit themselves and, thus, only feed the fire of criticism.

A Chi Phi Weekend!

John Oliver H'17, past Grand Alpha, presented first place trophy to Capt. Mike Pittard of the University of Georgia team at Chi Phi's southeastern annual basketball tournament. Participating were chapters from Auburn, Emory, U. of Florida, Florida Institute of Technology, Georgia, Georgia Tech and colonies from Georgia State, Oglethorpe and Tennessee. Mike also got "out-standing player" trophy.

North Carolina's Steve Fuller receives the second place trophy from Bates Block G'40, H'42. The defending champions lost 72 to 70 to Georgia. Two-day tourney closed March 2 in Lovett School gym, Atlanta.

At right is Emory's centennial team, defeated in the first round by Alpha-Alpha, last year's champions, and above is a corner of the University of Georgia rooting section as they saw the championship won by their brothers.

More on Dartmouth

From Letters Appearing in the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine, January and March, 1969

To the Editor:

My fraternity has just closed its doors at Dartmouth. It all happened so quietly and quickly that few are even aware of the fact. Chi Phi Fraternity, which had a 68-year existence on our campus, has been removed from the list of active chapters and has had its charter revoked by the Chi Phi national congress for an obviously premeditated and arbitrary action.

A year ago, the brothers decided that the National had seen its last initiation fee from new members at Dartmouth. The brothers decided and talked the chapter corporation into going along with them as a local. Realizing at the last that the alumni really should be informed, they drafted a letter apprising us of the situation and even called for our opinion. Unfortunately, the alumni never did hear the outcome of that poll, but it mattered little because the path had long since been set. The national fraternity itself made the final severance move as it obviously had to do with all the initiation fees months overdue and probably long ago spent on furniture or a few extra kegs for the boys.

It is unfortunate that the end of a long tradition has come. The real losers are future generations of Dartmouth men who will never know the difference. Such is life as it moves forward—or is it backward?

With over half the Dartmouth fraternities now turned local, I suppose that general sentiment runs counter to mine, but I recall fondly my fraternal associations and what Chi Phi meant to me as a member and executive officer. As a member of the Chi Phi Club of New York, I met men from other chapters throughout the country and from all walks of life. Men such as newscaster Walter Cronkite, Gerald Phillippe, board chairman of General Electric, and Bill Phieffer, former ambassador to the Dominican Republic, all came to our dinners and were glad to speak on behalf of the fraternity system, surely not because they had nothing better to do but rather because they felt that the fraternity system had given them something special in the way

May 31 is Date for Chapter Formalities at U. of C.—Davis

"THE LONG COLD NIGHTS spent at the Country Manor, an unexpected telephone call from town, heavy clothes, rain, trucks and their noise, a feather in a cap, a rabbit hunt, elections, RF's, intramural basketball games, rushing both prospective members and activities, skiing and trips to the snow, a cup of coffee on Thursday nights, the silence of a stroll across the quad after the library has closed, the watery shake of a growing dog, mowing wet and getting stuck in the mud, picking up lint from the Town House floor, meetings and plottings, gatherings and scatterings, sandwich lunches and no cups! IFC, national officer visitors, a sprig of mistletoe found blown from a nearby tree, the warmth of a pinning, the choice to pledge, wind, rain in torrents leaking into the study room, cans out, "When First I Saw a True Chi Phi," sinks out, spirits down and up, books, study, rain, clouds, songs, brotherhood, friends, Chi Phi; these are some many moods of winter in Davis."

Our metamorphosis into a fraternity can fairly be dated to the winter quarter, 1969. As the Colony takes its place among the fraternities on the Davis campus (University of California) we look forward to your company on May 31st, when we will formally take our place among the chapters of the Chi Phi Fraternity.

of leadership ability and a more mature outlook. As a local fraternity we now lose identity and the chance for such contacts with men from all the other chapters. We are just another "Ivy Club on an ivy campus."

To most readers, I suppose this letter will produce only a yawn, but for the few remaining who do not see the fraternity system as an anachronism on its last legs but rather as a real hope for the young men of promise in our country, it is a very sad commentary. —THOMAS J. SWARTZ JR. '49, Short Hills, N.J.

To the Editor:

Far from producing a yawn, as he surmises, the letter from T. J. Swartz, Jr. '49 arouses me to voice one more protest about the demise of Chi Phi at Dartmouth. My objections are threefold: (1) The Way In Which This Step Was Taken. Instead of an honorable statement of intent, the brothers now active chose merely to withhold initiation fees, a step they knew would, in time, result in expulsion from the

New home of Tau, currently under construction. The Chapter will occupy it in September 1969.

National. Meanwhile, they could tap a few extra kegs with the money, while they continued to benefit from the National affiliation. (2) The Worthlessness Of The "Opinion Poll," taken of Chi Phi alumni as to whether or not "going local" met with their approval. This meant nothing as the die had already been cast. In any event, we were not furnished any further information on the poll, nor were we given any chance to implement the alternatives it set forth: selling the chapter house, or organizing another group loyal to Chi Phi. (3) The Total Disregard Of The Fine National Reputation enjoyed now and for one of the longest periods in the history of American college fraternities by Chi Phi, founded at Princeton in 1824. All this, which for 68 years Dartmouth men had learned to respect, and the national association with alumni of other chapters it permitted in later years, they cynically tossed aside for a few paltry bucks.

Gentlemen: I submit, these are the acts of what in my generation would have been called an immature, irresponsible group of playboys. Surely this entourage does not represent the revered and forward-looking traditions of Chi Phi. To go along with their conduct, as the alumni corporation has

Judge Don Cheney, Chi '11, Dedicates Life to Young Men

MAYBE PONCE DELEON didn't find the fountain of youth because he believed it to be a spring. One of our members appears to have discovered a "fountain of youth" through his continuous and dedicated service to boys.

Judge Don Cheney, Orlando, Florida, just passed his 80th birthday! That figure 80 is no misprint although we, too, find it surprising for Don is just as active as many of us years his junior. He continues to serve the country in the "Right of Way" department.

Don's keen interest in helping boys become better men began before 1920. He was the second Boy Scout Troop done, is to condone dishonesty, irresponsibility and lack of consideration for others. A new group loyal to Chi Phi should be organized and the present local left to fend for itself.

Dartmouth has something at stake, too, in this and similar conversions from National to local now rampant on the campus. As Brother Swartz says, we are now "just another Ivy Club on an ivy campus." Those of us who live in the midwest know how low the ivy image has fallen in this area. In sports we are regarded as provincial, our athletes not even worthy of consideration for All-America honors. Even academically we are outbid for many of the more prominent scholars. Now we choose to withdraw even to a greater degree — national affiliations for our "clubs" are beneath us! At least, that's the picture that seems to be coming through. — JOHN F. ANDERSON, Dartmouth — Chi Phi '34, Shaker Heights, Cleveland, Ohio.

leader in Orlando. In 1923, while Rotary International was instrumental in establishing Boy Scout committee and they organized the Central Florida Council of Boy Scouts.

He served as its president several times and has held many responsible posts. In 1931 he received the Silver Beaver Award for his outstanding service. This was the first time this highest recognition for Scout leadership was presented to a Central Floridian.

Don was the first Juvenile Judge in Orange County, serving from 1919 to 1933, and also organized our Parental Home. He was chairman of the P.T.A. committee that organized Orlando's first playground and set up the City's recreational department.

During World War II, he served our young men through work in the American Red Cross and after the war, as assistant to President Hamilton Holt at Rollins College. He has been a trustee of Rollins and has been the recipient of the Sullivan Medallion bestowed by this college.

His strong belief in the merit of youth agencies led him to serve repeatedly as a director on the boards of both the Y.M.C.A. and the Boys' Club.

Apparently his close association with young people over many years, has been his "Fountain of Youth." All through these years, his church and many community and state groups have benefitted by his leadership.

Don is a charter member of the Rotary Club of Orlando. As you might expect of a man so imbued with the ideal of service, he has been a member and chairman of many Rotary committees. (From the Orlando, Florida Rotoptimist, February 1969)

Woodson F. Heath, Nu, '17, Reminisces on Life of a Boy in Texas At the Beginning of the Century

I WAS BORN in a small Texas town seven years before the turn of the century. Life for a young boy was quite different in 1900 and 69 years later. I saw the first of a good many things, such as the first automobile that came to town, and the first silent moving pictures. As I remember, the first automobile was a one cylinder Oldsmobile, with bicycle wheels and a steering handle instead of a wheel. It was cranked by a handle on the right side of the front seat. As there were no garages at the time, the young banker who owned it, had it at the local bicycle shop to have it worked on. Upon my request he agreed to take me for a ride as soon as it could be started. The ride was short, as the car stopped after about six blocks and refused to start again, so we had to walk back to town. As more cars appeared on the scene, the city council passed an ordinance, limiting the speed to eight miles per hour with five miles, when turning a corner. My grandfather operated a general merchandise store fifteen miles north of town and would come to Victoria to transact business with his banker and wholesaler, via horse and buggy. He came into our house fussing one day because one of the new cars had nearly caused his horse to run away and remarked that "They ought to outlaw the dratted things."

I saw my first movies at a carnival that came to town, one being of a railroad train rapidly approaching and one of the Corbett-Fitzsimmonds title prize fight. Our favorite show at the carnival was that of a young girl standing in front of a large wooden board, while her husband threw butcher knives all around her, some of the knives missing her by inches.

Occasionally a stage show came to the old opera house, and we saw a good many good plays, the first musical being "The Wizard of Oz." Finally a silent movie house was opened with a change in pictures every night. The pictures were short and cost only 5¢, so we all went nearly every night. My fox terrier dog named Shannie always accompanied me, and would go down front to watch the movie as intently as all of us did. Radios had not even been thought of and there were no airplanes.

Heating and cooking were done in wood burning stoves and light was furnished by kerosene lamps. I earned my spending money by stacking stove wood in the woodshed, cutting pine kindling, and mowing the lawn with a non-power mower, my remuneration amounting to two dollars per week.

Food was cheap. Round steak was five cents per pound with a soup bone thrown in. Frying size chickens were three dollars per dozen and a large loaf of bread cost a nickel.

Woodson Fearing Heath

For many years there were few cars and no really good roads; so that all of our travelling was by train. The locomotives burned coal and frequently, on a short trip with my father, I would get a cinder in one of my eyes.

My grandfather died in 1903, but my grandmother continued to live in the old country home until she passed on in the thirties at the age of 93. When school let out in the summer I always went to her place for several weeks of fishing and swimming. At times in the spring we gathered dewberries that grew wild in the pasture; we always got full of chiggers, that caused severe itching. The only treatment was a piece of salty bacon rind.

In the autumn huge flocks of plover would stop on the prairie land for about three weeks on the way to Mexico for the winter. As there was no game law on them, we would kill a good many; they were the finset eating bird I ever tasted. We could not walk up on them; but a friend had an old buckboard, pulled by an old horse that had been in the Spanish-American war and we could ride right up on the birds. We could shoot right by the old horse's head and it did not bother him a bit. We also hunted wild ducks in the winter and cottontail rabbits. My father had given me a double barrel, twelve gauge, shotgun for hunting and during the season my right shoulder stayed blue.

David Rea

David Rea Named on National Football Hall of Fame

DAVID REA, an Amherst senior from Ann Arbor, Mich., was named one of eleven National Football Hall of Fame Scholar-Athletes for 1968. Although at 210 lbs. Rea was not particularly big for his position, his quickness, strength and aggressiveness enabled him to make the transition to defensive tackle this year from offensive guard where he started as a junior. He played a large share in establishing Amherst's defensive unit as one of the stingiest among the nation's small colleges.

Entering Amherst as a National Merit Scholar, he has been on the Dean's List every semester. An economics major with a B plus average and an interest in law school, he is a candidate for Phi Beta Kappa and has applied for a Rhodes Scholarship. Dave, also a shotputter for the Amherst Track team, the Lord Jeff Society and Sphinx.

Solon P. Patterson

Solon P. Patterson Honored in Atlanta

SOLON P. PATTERSON, Gamma '57, was named one of Atlanta's five outstanding young men of the year by the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In Chi Phi, he was a Delta and then Beta of the Fraternity while an active. Since graduation, Brother Patterson has been President of the Gamma Trust Association, and is currently a Vice-President of the Atlanta Chi Phi Alumni Association.

Currently, as a partner in the Atlanta-based investment counsel firm, Montag & Caldwell, he serves as investment counsellor and a member of the primary investment committee. In addition, Brother Patterson is now Executive Vice-President of Atlanta's first mutual fund, the Alpha Fund, and President of the Alpha Research Corporation, the Fund's investment advisor.

Warren W. Williams

Warren Williams Now With South Africa Film Company

BROTHER WARREN W. WILLIAMS, Alpha Alpha '65, has been appointed an executive producer and director of marketing with Films of Africa Ltd., the South Africa-based company which is the largest producer and distributor of documentary motion pictures in Africa. The studio is located at Lone Hill, Witkoppen, Johannesburg.

A specialist in the field of audio-visual communication, Williams is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, where he majored in Mass Communication and in Political Science.

Brother Williams settled permanently in South Africa in 1967 following several months of extensive travel through central and southern Africa. He now makes his home in Johannesburg.

Rick Miller is New Adviser at Iota Delta

IOTA DELTA launched this semester at Indiana by welcoming its new Graduate Scholarship Advisor, Rick Miller. Rick's efforts will not hamper Iota Delta's social life though, as the chapter is planning for such events as Parents Weekend, the annual chapter golf tournament sponsored by Brother Estes, a great Spring Weekend in May, and, as always, Little 500.

In I.U. sports, Brothers Dave Estes and Don Padgett are vying for positions on the varsity golf team, while pledge Denny Ford is swinging for the freshman team. Also, a number of the brothers are looking forward to traveling to Sigma for an inter-chapter basketball tournament in April.

House improvements include a new library and a remodeled social room thanks to the efforts of Brother John Wellman. More remodeling is in the planning stages.

Iota Delta is proud to extend its congratulations to Brother John D. Craft IU '61, on his recent appointment to the position of Grand Zeta.

All in all, the brothers and pledges of Iota Delta are enjoying a busy and productive year.

Edwin E. Helm

Penn State Honors Edwin E. Helm

EDWARD E. HELM, A D '24, Cleveland, Ohio was honored by his Alma Mater, Pennsylvania State University, June 1968 with a Distinguished Alumni Medallion. The Awards were established in 1951 "to recognize and salute the achievement of outstanding alumni... whose personal life, professional activities and community service exemplify the objectives of the Pennsylvania State University."

Brother Helm is the Chairman of the Board of Directors of Reliance Electric and Engineering Company, a position he has held since retiring as president in 1965.

He is a director of the National City Bank of Cleveland, he maintains an interest in education as a trustee of Fenn Educational Foundation and the Educational Research Council of America. The latter body studies problems in the field of secondary education and develops programs in various subject areas to help better teaching through curriculum improvement.

Kent Flora New Adviser to Sigma Chapter

BROTHER KENT FLORA, S'66, Fairmount, Illinois, took over the Chapter Advisor roll to Sigma in October 1968 giving Brother R. Fulton, S'19, a much needed respite. Brother Fulton contributed many hours to the task of helping the chapter during the rebuilding program, often at the expense of other personal activity.

Brother Flora owns and operates an 810 acre grain farm a few miles from Champaign. A major sideline is a flock of purebred registered Shropshire sheep which he exhibits at expositions throughout the middle west and as far east as Pennsylvania. The most recent awards include the Governor's Trophy at the Illinois State Fair and the Reserve Grand Championship at the Indiana State Fair.

Brother Flora graduated from University of Illinois in 1966 where he received a degree in Agriculture. At the present his outside activities include: Director of the Illinois Shropshire Sheep Association, National Director of the American Shropshire Registry Association, member of Vermilion County Agricultural Advisory Board and member of the board of directors of the Vermilion County Republicans.

Brother Flora married Miss Nicolette Carras of Chicago in January. They are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Danville.

Rutherford L. Ellis

By CARL J. GLADFELTER, National Director

How do you say goodbye to an old friend, a faithful servant, and a trusted adviser and confidant? "Ruddy" was all of these to me and to Chi Phis all over America.

Brother Ellis will live forever through Chi Phi. His deeds and philosophy, expressed while a Grand Officer and a Trustee of the Chi Phi Educational Trust, have left an enduring mark. Every scholarship award, every student loan made to future generations of Chi Phis, will be a tribute to his genius. It was he who safely steered Chi Phi's course through the fraternity's most critical period—World War II. The funds he raised at that time made it possible to reopen every Chi Phi chapter when peace came.

How do you say goodbye? You don't—for he lives on.

"Ruddy" was born in Atlanta on May 8, 1904. He attended the University of Georgia where he was initiated into Chi Phi by the Eta chapter on September 22, 1921, a few days after he matriculated. He married Martha Hodgson in March, 1928. They have two children, a daughter, Mrs. John S. Langford, Jr. and a son Rutherford L. Ellis, Jr. Omega '49.

His business career was in the field of insurance and real estate. He was Chairman of the board of Lipscomb-Ellis Company and was the founder of Southern General Insurance Company and one of the founders of DeKalb County Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Brother Ellis was untiring in his efforts to assist others. For years he served in the fight against cancer at both the state and national level. His long service ended several years ago at the termination of his term as National Chairman of the American Cancer Society.

Brother Ellis' father, W. D. Ellis, Eta '90 was a Chi Phi at Georgia as was his brother, Lamar H. Ellis, Eta '29. His son, Rutherford, Jr., '49 is a Chi Phi from Georgia Tech, and his nephew, Lamar H. Ellis, Jr., Eta '60 was associated with him in business. His great nephew, Ewell Gay III, was also a member of Eta chapter, class of '68.

Brother Ellis was a member of the Piedmont Driving Club, the Capital City Club, Nine O'Clocks and the University Yacht Club. He was also a trustee of Canterbury Court, Lettie Pate Evans Foundation, Trebor Foundation and Henrietta Egleston Hospital.

A number of contributions have been made to the Trust in his memory. Others wishing to do so may send memorial gifts made payable to Chi Phi Educational Trust.

Brother Rutherford L. Ellis, Eta '25, Grand Alpha 1941-43, Grand Delta 1936-39, Grand Gamma 1935-36. Trustee Chi Phi Educational Trust, died in Atlanta March 6, 1969.

A Fraternity Bridges the Generation Gap

(From an address by Phillip R. Shriver, President, Miami University, on the occasion of the installation of Omicron Delta of Chi Phi.)

I HAVE A BOND with Chi Phi. I hold in my hand a Chi Phi pin bearing the number 2377, which makes it perhaps the oldest pin in this room tonight. It was received by my father* sixty years ago when he and eleven others reactivated the Chi Phi chapter at Ohio Wesleyan.

My bond with Chi Phi goes beyond this pin. I can recall as a youngster reading my father's copies of the CHAKETT and noting in them the "Peachtree" address in Atlanta, Georgia, and the fact that there were then thirty-four chapters in the fraternity across the nation. I note with interest tonight that the chapter we are here honoring is but the forty-first. It is obvious then that Chi Phi has grown slowly, with measured strides, in the years since my youth. Be that as it may, I am sure that Chi Phi has been determined through the years that its growth will be measured qualitatively and that is of primary importance.

Certainly quality is a hallmark of this newest chapter. You who are the nineteen charter members are particularly fortunate because you are on the ground floor of a new undertaking. You have the opportunity to set the tone, the traditions, for what will follow. You need not be fettered by any mistakes of the past. Because you are a smaller group than most fraternity chapters at the present time, you can be more tightly knit. The bonds of brotherhood ought then to be all the stronger.

You will enjoy other advantages of fraternity life. You will experience the interaction of the group with the individual, with the efforts of all directed to help each member achieve responsible maturity. You will know the advantage of lifelong friendships, with the direct involvement of each member in decision-making, and the enhancement of your potential for leadership.

Yet, despite these advantages of fraternal association, the role of the fraternity on the college campus today is not what it should be. It could be far more significant than it is. I do not see today the predominant position which fraternity men used to hold in campus affairs. Fraternities must be relevant to modern problems, both on campus and off. They cannot afford to rest on the laurels of the past.

It seems to me that fraternities today have one opportunity above all others to be particularly relevant. I am speaking of the so-called "generation gap." It has been said that the generations are finding it increasingly difficult to communicate, to interrelate. Increasingly, members of the younger generation are speaking in strident, often intemperate, tones as they seek to impress upon the older generation their concern for change on a host of fronts. Simultaneously, the older generation is responding to the younger in tones of caustic reaction and, oftentimes, disgust. In these difficult times, it seems to me that the fraternity has a most important role to play. The fraternity can be the bridge, the link between the generations. It can close the generation gap. It can help to bring us together again. For, in a fraternity, all are brothers.

We have in this room tonight members of the class of '72. We have others from '32. And the pin which I hold in my hand was worn by one of the Class of '13. Yet, it is one fraternity, one bond, one brotherhood, uniting all here in common cause.

This, then, can be the mission of this chapter, of all chapters, to bring the generations together again. The times are critical, the need is urgent.

Earlier this evening, one of the student speakers commented on the fact that he hoped that Chi Phi at Miami would become one of the truly strong chapters in a traditionally strong fraternity system. I would leave each of you with this challenge: I dare you to make this the best fraternity chapter at Miami!

100 Years at Emory

The annual pushball battle between freshmen and sophomores continued to be won by the latter except when a tie was declared, but the innocent bystanders, upperclassmen and faculty, became the victims of de-touring by both parties of the belligerents.—The ball was twice stolen, but unhappily it was both times recovered.²⁶

Another great breakthrough at Emory occurred on "October 25, 1941, when the first administration-approved on-campus dance was held in the auditorium-dining hall [off-campus dances were first approved in 1933, only 96 years after the founding of Emory College]."²⁷ The fact that Dr. English reported that the lifting of this ban hardly attracted any notice although the subject had long been a subject of disagreement between the students and the trustees; however, minutes of the Gamma Chapter often refer as early as 1904 to fraternity dances and others in the 1920s in which many of the Atlanta mothers such as Mrs. Preston Arkwright, mother of Preston Arkwright, Jr., aided the chapter in its sin by hosting these dances in their homes.

Mrs. Arkwright, whose home was located at the corner of Lullwater Road and Ponce deLeon Avenue, near the campus, was more than generous in hosting the Chi Phis at dinners and dances in her home which contained a large ballroom. She also donated much in time and furniture to make the Emory chapter house a home. The chapter is greatly indebted to her and, later, the Chi Phi Mothers Club for their devoted interest.

In early spring 1941 the seasonal tension was eased by the first Dooley's Frolics. Dooley, the Department of Biology's skeleton—from Oxford days had been the mouthpiece of caustic comment on matters of student interest in the Phoenix and Campus. Incarnated as the Lord Misrule of the undergraduate festivities, he roams the campus for the week-end and assumes outrageous privileges on the quadrangle and in the classroom.²⁸

Since the birth of Dooley's, his spring frolics have developed into a half-week of parties, skits and general bedlam. Frequently the chapter has placed or won during the skit exhibition. Unfortunately the Chapter only placed 3rd in 1967 and did not place in 1968; but, all on the campus agreed the Chi Phi skit was the most enjoyable. Realizing there were no Cecil B. DeMille in the chapter and in trying to stay within the light spirit of "Dooley's Frolics," in recent years the chapter has presented a number of excellent humorous skits while

With World War II came a new challenge for the fraternity system. During the war the size of each chapter was greatly reduced and each house was turned over to public use with the coming of the Navy V-12 program. "Of the twelve chapters functioning on the campus in July 1, 1943, eleven are still alive and functioning. Sigma Pi has been dormant since that date, but this condition probably was not caused by the coming of the Navy V-12 program."²⁹ In the fall of 1944, Chi Phi had the largest pledge class, 15 men, bringing the total active chapter membership to 30. The total number of fraternity men at this time was 300 with the largest chapter on campus totaling 43 men. Before the war the percentage of fraternity men in the student body ranged from 70% to 85%. Although this percentage dropped drastically during the war from July 1944 until November 1944 the percentage of fraternity men in the college increased from 35% to 50%.

Brother Charles Edward (Ned) Steele recently wrote describing—

The "lean" years of W. W. II when we kept the chapter going as a labor of love were good experiences. Emory took over the House as a civilian dormitory for all University housing was used by Army, Navy, and Marine educational units. We had the Chapter Room at Connally Hall, and perhaps it meant more to us than ever.

During the "occupation" Brother Charles Shepard, in a letter to Judge L. Z. Rosser, said that—

The physical condition of the Chapter House, Tom Connally Hall, is about as good as could be expected with constant use to capacity and the normal depreciation that happens to property with the passing of the years. Approximately half of the occupants of the house are Chi Phis at the present time and the others are mostly Emory School of Theology students (why do you suppose the University saw fit to house this un-Godly combination) placed there while Emory is operating our house for the war duration as one of the University dormitories. Gamma has the use of the sitting room and library and the possession of these two rooms have been valuable toward continuing the Fraternity atmosphere. The interior walls and floors of the house could easily use fresh paint now, so that it is apparent that when the University releases the house after the war this will be needed very badly both to preserve our property and the continuity of the attractiveness to our brothers to live in the house.

Present active chapter roster including pledges numbers about 33. Alternate Tuesday nights the weekly meetings are held in the sitting room so that Pledges can attend and keep in touch with them. Prospects are good for continuance of similar active chapter situation at least until next November.

In July of 1946, The Gamma Trust Association began a drive for funds to repair and completely refurnish Tom Connally Hall for the first time since its opening in 1930. On August 9, 1946, the Chapter House was seriously damaged by fire. A large part of the third floor and roof were destroyed and there was water and smoke damage to most of the house. This fire, instead of solving, complicated our financial problems. After we had received payment for the fire loss from the insurance companies, an additional $8,000.00 was needed to restore the house to proper condition and refurnish it. This greatly restricted the activities of the boys in that they could not use the House. At this time, Pollard Turman, Charles Shepard, Hugh M. Dorsey, Jr., Bates Block, Robert E. Martin, and Charles T. Winship headed the Chi Phi fund raising drive to restore Tom Connally Hall.

On August 9, 1946, the House was rebuilt and rededicated in May 1947 to Robert William Neel Jr.,

'41, Olin John Imberly, '41, Edward Burson Tucker '42, and Goodrich Cook White, Jr., '39 Gamma brothers who died in World War II.

In 1949 a grill was built in the back yard and during the fall quarter of 1953 the new Chi Phi pledges built a concrete terrace as a welcomed addition to the House.

In 1951 the new basement and playroom was completed. "Several cubic yards of dirt which were believed to be a portion of Stone Mountain, were removed from the basement area and hauled outside the House to form a terrace."³⁰

With the basement completely hollowed out, the actual work was begun in the late spring. Several concrete walls were torn out and replaced by steel beams. The walls and ceiling were covered with plasterboard. Recessed and indirect lighting was installed. Rubber tile was used to cover the concrete floors. The construction and materials were financed by the Gamma Trust and contributions from the brothers and alumni.³¹

Our own interior decorators went to work, painting the hallway down to the basement a decorator's pink and the basement itself a cool gray, adding a colorful wallpaper to one wall.³²

This is quite a change from today's basement.

In 1958 a back wing was added to the house to include a new modern kitchen, bathrooms, and additional sleeping space. Still, one of the most used and appreciated additions to Tom Connally was the basement. Since its initiation as a party room in 1951 numerous pledge classes have added to and enlarged "The Basement." Just during this past fall the pledge class of 1968 tore down existing walls to increase the useable basement space by about $\frac{1}{3}$. (Incidentally, this enlargement was an intentional and constructive gesture on behalf of the pledges.) This latest improvement, because of what was and still is limited space, brought to an uneventful end the old Black Room originally built by a pledge class in 19—. In the height of its day the Black Room was equipped with a stereo system, indirect red lighting and much more. If walls could write history the Black Room could publish a best seller (not for sale over-the-counter).

During the summer of 1966, with a good deal of support from loyal alumni, the house was renovated keeping it one of the most beautiful and impressive fraternity houses at Emory. At that time, the $45,000.00 renovation included carpeting throughout the house, built-in desks, shelves, and drawers in each of the rooms, modernization and repairing of other facilities, and air conditioning the basement.

Throughout the recent years of the Gamma Chapter, the house had played an important part in the lives of the brothers by providing a home, a place to study, a place to eat, date, and most of all, a place to know and appreciate other Chi Phi brothers. But even today, after the chapters recent 1966 renovation there is much need for additional space. The chapter's third floor study room has been taken over as a bedroom, the library is now a TV room and parking behind the house is always a traffic jam; however, plans are underway to begin the necessary improvements next summer.

Another important date in the life of Emory and Chi Phi is 1953. Like permitting dancing on the campus in 1941, the Trustees making Emory college a co-educational institution in this year did not cause an immediate sensation. This is probably due in part to the fact that Emory, to some degree, had allowed women on campus; and, with many attractive Atlanta girls and Agnes Scott girls nearby the real impact of this move was not immediately "felt" by the men at Chi Phi. Emory had achieved true University status. The Emory of 1953 was very different from the Emory the Trustees of the school had envisioned in 1919. Regarding co-education, the minutes of their meeting on June 7, 1919 stated the following:

—It is proper doubtless to open the Teachers College and the Summer Course for Teachers to female students, but in all other departments the University should be for male students only. The departments of law and medicine especially should not be open to women. Young men and young women working together in a dissecting room, or hearing together lectures on physiology and anatomy, would in my judgement create a most indelicate and injurious situation. And women lawyers would not promote justice in the courts.³

Chi Phi Plans for the Future

In 1968, under the leadership of the Gamma Trust Association, Gamma Chi Phi's have encouraged the formation of a group of fraternity actives and alumni to work even more closely with their individual chapters and with each other to see that Emory Greeks are able to meet, with alumni help and advice, any common problem arising within the fraternity system encompassing problems not only relating to the active, but also the national and local alumni organizations.

R. H. VanHorne '29, Alexandria, Virginia has two adopted sons. He reflected this thought in a recent letter and hoped that it might be shared with others.

"I highly recommend to persons that they consider adoption of children when it becomes apparent that this has to be. I know that some families have had problems with adopted children, but my investigations show that these problems are in the minority. Naturally my investigations are not extensive, but those I have made favor adoption."
